"We live in a place where people wear white 365 days a year," points out bikini designer Bianca Coletti, who teamed up last year with Lauren Goldfarb, a former local boutique owner, to address a common conundrum in warm climate dressing: "Florida's year-round balmy weather makes it difficult to distinguish our look in November from that of July, so we created this line," says Goldfarb. Together, the Miami-based partners have expanded the formerly swimwear-only collection to include a full array of resortwear (breezy caftans) and fancier night-out pieces (floor-sweeping maxi dresses) in lush, oversize florals, exotic ikats, and evolving color palettes that reflect the change of seasons yet are light and airy enough to keep Floridians cool in the heat. Available at Rebel (6669 Biscayne Blvd., Miami, 305-758-2369).
